

Australian Democratic Beliefs

Parliamentary Democracy

The power of the government is held by the people who choose representatives through regular elections

The Rule of Law

The law is applied equally and fairly, so that no one is above the law

Respect for All Individuals

All Australians are expected to treat each other with dignity and respect, regardless of:

age	religion
race	country of origin
gender	sexual orientation
heritage	marital status culture	political views
disability	wealth

Living Peacefully

A stable and peaceful nation where change occurs through open and free discussion, and the democratic process

Respecting Australia's Rights and Liberties
